The Northfield Bandits.

A dispatch from Northfield, Minn., to the Cincionati Commercial says: Mr. Wilcox's story is as follows: Mr. Haywood occupied the cashi r's seat at the desk, which you see at the end of the counter. Mr. Bunker and myself occupied seats at the desk, Mr Banker being nearest the opening at the corner. The first thing we knew the three men were upon or over the counter, with revolvers presented at our heads, one of them exclaiming: "Throw up your hands, for we intend to rob the bank. and if you halloo we will blow your brains out," and we could not do other than comply. They then asked which was the cashier, to which Mr. Haywood reptied: "He is not in." They then sprang over the counter and demanded the sale to be onened. Addressing each in turo, they said: "You are the cashier, which each denied.

Seeing Haywood seated at the cashier's desk, one of the ruffins went up to him with his long, narrow barrelled pistol and said: "You are the cashier; now open the safe."
Mr. Haywood said: "It is a time lock, and cannot be opened now." One of the men then went into the vault, the door being open, also the outer door of the safe. Hywood at once sprang forward and closed the door of the viult, shutting the robber io, when another of the men seized Haywood by the collar and dragged him away from the door and released the mearcerated robber.

The man who came out of the vault-a slim, dark complexioned man, with a black moustache-then called to the other to seize the silver which was lying loose (about $15) and put it in the sack. They did not do this, but seized about $12 in scrip, and put it into a two bushel flour sack which they had with them. The dark complexioned man, who appeared to be the leader, then again attacked Haywood, insisting upon his opening the safe, threatening to cut his throat if he did not, and actually drawing a big knife across his throat. The hereic and faithful teller, however, was not to be deterred from his duty, and would rather sacrifice his life than berray his trust.

Some few moments-it seemed ages to the bewildered and terror stricken lookers-onwere spent in Haywood's struggling to break from the murderous villian and gain his liberry. At length he broke away, and, regaining his het, can toward the door, crying "murder!" The man at once struk him with a pistol and knocked him down, and dragging him to the safe door, commanded him to open it. But the intrepid elerk stolidly refused, when the villian shot at him but did not hit him. Evi dently the shot was intended to intimidate rather than to injure, but the scoundrel had reckoned without his host, for the effect was lost upon Haywood. But upon the discharge of the pistol Bunker made a start for the back door, and ran for dear life, one of the robbers pursuing and firing, the shot taking effect in the shoulder.

ST. PAUL. MINN., Sept. 14, 1876. The campaign of citizens against the North field bandits is still in active prosecution. Last night the robbers were corrailed in the timber near Mankato, not less than from 400 to 500 men being engaged in guarding every point where it was deemed possible an escape could be made. At two o'clock this morning three of the robbers appeared at the Blue Earth Bridge, when the guards took to their heels and the robbers crossed over. At daylight this morning the pursuit was continued and a camp was discovered which had been hurriedly vacuted by the robbers. In it were found the coats and blankets of its recent occupants and a half cooked breakfast.

"The latest intelligence is that the bandits have been again surrounded near Minnesota Falls, Blue Earth county, and their capture is pronounced certain.

The present scene of operations is not fifty miles from Northfield. The fact that the robbers have not escaped, or at least succeeded in getting further away, is undoubtedly because of a lack of knowledge of the country making them bewildered. The country in that section is heavily timbered, swampy and wild, and is defficult to traverse even under favorable cir cumstances. The robbers are now without horses, blankets or coats, and they have apparemby little to eat except green corn. Altogether they are having a very rough time of it.
